

Newsletter DWIH New York

August 2022

Dear reader,

Summer greetings from the DWIH New York team! We hope that have been staying cool during these hot summer weeks. We are busy finalizing the logistics of the FUTURE FORUM: Fabricating the Future, planned for October 6th and 7th in New York City. It will feature transatlantic experts working to make the fashion industry more sustainable.

We have updated the conference website and will share the fantastic speaker lineup as well as the registration link soon. Stay tuned!

With kind regards
The DWIH New York Team

WHAT'S NEW?

Sustainability Initiatives on Governors Island

The annual DWIH focus topic "Sustainable Innovations" encapsulates a broad range of applications, so the DWIH New York Team wanted to experience what this could look like on the ground. The team went on a field trip to Governors Island, located in the New York Upper Bay, to learn about local sustainability initiatives.

Video-Interview Max Jungmann mit Jan Lüdert

A special treat for our German-speaking followers: After the interactive scenario workshop in June, Jan Lüdert asked the workshop leader Max Jungmann about his impressions of the event and Max took the opportunity to ask Jan a few questions in return.

Understanding Artificial Intelligence

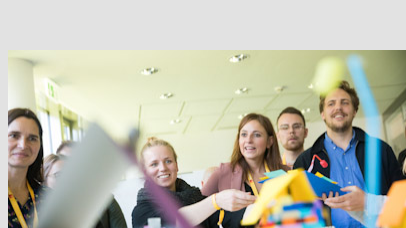

Whether it is a digital assistant on a smartphone or tablet, or smart speakers, just what goes on behind the scenes of AI-controlled systems usually remains hidden from their users. Since 2021, this topic has been a major topic of research at the Transregional Collaborative Research Centre TRR 318 'Constructing Explainability,' a joint endeavor of Bielefeld University and Paderborn University.
